The Kitsap County Planning Commission met on the above-stated date at the Greater Hansville Community Center at Buck Lake Park
6959 NE Buck Lake Road, Hansville, WA

Members present: Lou Foritano, Robert Baglio, Linda Paralez, John Taylor, Fred Depee, Jim Sommerhauser, Mike Gustavson, Michael Brown, Tom Nevins and Robert Baglio
Members absent: Jim Sommerhauser
Staff present: Peter Sullivan, Heather Adams, Larry Keeton, Scott Diener and Planning Commission Secretary Mary Seals

5:30:00

A. Call Meeting to Order, Introductions

B. Adoption of Agenda

C. Public Comments

Keeton introduces the new planning commissioner, Mike Brown. He discusses the Site Specific applications and Policy RL-8.

Chair Foritano makes a statement regarding his role in the proceedings regarding the Greater Hansville Area Plan and conflict of interest. He reads from email sent by Scott Diener discussing this.

A motion is made by Commissioner Gustavson and seconded by Commissioner Taylor that Lou Foritano not be the chairman, but participate in the questioning for the Greater Hansville portion of the meeting.

The Vote:
Yes: 6
No: 2
The motion carries.

Chair Foritano defers to Vice-Chair Baglio to conduct the meeting.

Baglio opens the Public Hearing.

D. Continuation of Public Hearing: Greater Hansville Community Plan:
Pete Sullivan, Associate Planner, DCD

Art Ellison, Chair of GHAAC: You have in front of you the letter that GHAAC has composed along with a brochure; the brochure describes GHAAC, its mission, and the community values, and the community objectives. We wrote a letter to re-affirm our commitment to the Hansville community plan. We believe that planning is a continuously evolving process; we know that it is important to include as a baseline the goals, policies and values of our community in the Kitsap County Comprehensive Plan.
Back as far as 1993 the community of Hansville started a planning process and it sort of faltered because the main people that were running it moved away. We resurrected it in 2003 as the Hansville Futures Project. Many hours were spent by numerous volunteers, we held lengthy public meetings, we advertized, we sent out questionnaires to the entire community; not only were the questionnaires included in the Hansville log, but they were sent to all property owners in the area. We got the list from the Assessor’s Office. The Futures project has always been open. We’ve always tried to include as many people as possible. The Futures had been well planned, had widespread participation, regular communication, community meetings and evolved over about a 3 year period. Dozens of people participated in this. We also held meetings not only in Hansville, we held meetings in the affected communities; we held meeting at Eglon, at Driftwood Key, we even had a meeting down at the reservation at Port Gamble. So after GHAAC was formed it became the driving force as to create the community plan under DCD’s direction. We involved DCD in all of our deliberations; they were present in our planning meetings. We used the Future’s document as a starting point. We understand that the Future’s document began in about 2003 through about 2005; however, we affirm that the goals and visions that were created by the Futures were valid and that’s what we used to start. For more than a year now we have had a vocal minority began attending the GHAAC meetings and the planning meetings and from there interaction in the rest of the meetings it seemed that they were trying to go back over the goal and over the values and they kept bringing those things up. I think the basic premise was because our planning before was so old, it was no longer valid. We realize that the planning process is lengthy process. These people seem to think that if we stop the process right now and ask for public input again, things would be fine. However, it would again be a lengthy process, but also waste the thousands of hours that volunteers have put in.
These individuals actually did not start participating until the speed tables were installed in Hansville. That brought a lot of people; it wakened them and said, hey there’s something going on. The speed tables were not a GHAAC function; they were started by a local grass-roots type committee that was worried about traffic safety. After GHAAC was formed the traffic safety committee was brought into GHAAC. For the record, GHAAC had no political power, we have no ability to make law, we have no ability to make regulations, we merely recommend to the County. It is also noted that the individuals that have been commenting to the negative had not been involved in the Futures project until about a year ago. We have been working closely with DCD this time. We would like to mention that the people filing the Minority Report are the same individuals that sued 41 members of GHAAC and the County. And have created a website that mostly spreads disinformation. While we could challenge the allegations made by the descending group, we feel it would serve no positive purpose. We are proud of the work we have accomplished with Futures in the Greater Hansville Community Plan. So at this time we present you the best efforts of our community and the professional planners at Kitsap County to be affirmed and forwarded to the Board of County Commissioners for their approval.

Gustavson: There are three things that we can do. We can modify the zoning.
We can modify the use table in the zoning. Or we can assist you with design standards for construction. Not much else we can do. Is there anything in any of those three items we can help you with specifically? The zoning’s all rural.
Ellison: I don’t see the change if zoning as particularly helping because the values of the Futures was to maintain rural character.

Gustavson: I understand that. Is there anything in the Use Table we could help you with?

Discussion is held about the Use Tables and Design Standards. Gustavson states that he’s not sure we can help you.

Ellison: What we need, Kitsap County is required to have a Comprehensive Plan and that would cover all the land in Kitsap County. Our thoughts were if we do not become a driving force behind putting our goals and our standards in the Comprehensive Plan then someone else will do it for us. Personally, and a lot of my fellow citizens, really would like to let the County know what we value. Just a wild example would be type of building, condominiums and things like this. People might come in and say we would like a zoning variance…

Gustavson: This falls in the Use Tables, so if you have something we’d be happy to help you.

Ellison: Ok and we would like you and Kitsap County and Commissioners in the Comprehensive Plan to know that that is what we value. We would not like something that really alters our rural character.

Foritano asks why then the plan? What is the need for a community plan?

Ellison: The community plan would be our contribution to the comprehensive plan. We would much rather have our community involved in whatever planning steps you are taking instead of having someone from Port Orchard or outside the community just come in and plan for us. We want to be a partner in your planning.

Cindy McDermott, Hansville Resident: This was not brought up last time, this is about eldercare. It’s also in the community plan and the Futures project. There were some issues that were never brought up last meeting; one was for some form of re-zoning for eldercare homes or assisted living. This has been brought up before by other members. I think you can find it on the Futures report pages 7 and 8 as one of the values. This was brought up at the meeting, but wasn’t given the time of day. I believe it was because the members of GHAAC at that time was afraid that if Kitsap County would so a re-zoning just for this church to put in an eldercare facility that it may be a huge re-zoning for the entire Hansville area. That’s not what this eldercare facility was about. She reads from the letter sent to Planning Commissioners last week…(see written comments)

Depee: its 20 acre site for this church, right? Why do you think it wasn’t included in the process?

McDermott: I really think the church came into this a little late.

Depee: I did a little checking on that there are five areas that are exempt from coding for zoning, one of them is churches. But you still have to get a special use permit. He explains the process for her.
Tom Wood, Hansville Resident: he asks the audience how many people are from Futures and GHAAC. I am a career Air Force Officer, I spent 20 years of my life flying jets, and when I wasn’t flying jets I was on the staff. One of my staff jobs was Chief Crisis and Contingency planning for Headquarters Europe. I was responsible for putting together plans for things like Kosovo and Bosnia. The plan that you have before you was pulled from a document written by the Futures committee, and was basically rolled over by those same people who are not members of GHAAC. GHAAC claims to speak for the community. GHAAC is not elected by the community. 40% of the community lives in Driftwood Key. Driftwood Key by its own covenants and bylaws cannot have a representative speak for them to GHAAC or at GHAAC. So 40% of Hansville is not represented by GHAAC right of the bat, at least according to Driftwood Key bylaws. They had an election of GHAAC officers here in May; they played musical chairs. The gentleman alleged to be my representative has never talked to me; I don’t even know who he is. They claim that a lot of notification is given for meetings; documentation’s been turned in to show that that’s not the case. I have no problem with the plan if it’s a well written plan, a well conceived plan and it’s a plan that everybody wants. The last thing that most of these people were responsible for was the speed bumps. 63 people signed a petition saying they wanted them. Well, over 600 people, once they were in figured out what was going on signed a petition they didn’t. One of the members of this group lives on the road to the lighthouse. She’s unhappy about a boat ramp. It was pointed out to her that speed bumps would slow down the traffic, she said speed bumps don’t work; she’s in favor of the other speed bumps. GHAAC did not do the survey that the County required and I really cant say that’s their fault because a County Commissioner, Ms. Endreson, pretty much wrote rush job over the procedure to put those speed bumps in. But the bottom line is this, these folks do not speak for the majority of the people. You can’t get on the GHAAC committee unless you’re one of them. Had a guy try to quit, they wouldn’t let him quit. They said we know you’re old, you can’t hear, you really don’t want to get involved; we’ll have somebody be your proxy. These are the people that are speaking for the community of Hansville. Most of them haven’t read the plan. Art Ellison stood up here and says he wants to keep it rural residential. Art should read the plan, it talks about condominiums. It’s not a good representation; I’m not very fond of the plan. Taking an old plan, the Futures plan, trying re-write it and in the middle of it having the funding cut so that the guys that are responsible at the County for writing the plan are basically sh? (Unintelligible). Commissioner Bauer says ‘I want a plan’. They gave him a plan. A bad plan is not a plan you should have.

Depee: If it’s a bad plan, what would be your suggestion to make it a good plan; not involved with whose participating?

Wood: Sure. The information that the plan is based on....

Depee: No, I would like you to address the finished product. This map that we have now; what part of this plan did you not like?

Wood: I didn’t like the plan is that it uses terms that are not used.

Depee: Are you satisfied with the zoning?
Wood: They are trying to change the zoning. I would change their attempt to change the zoning by Norwegian Point Park.

Discussion is help about what the point is of Depee’s questions.

Wood: The other thing is the zoning for condominiums, eldercare and all that; there aren’t enough facilities out there. Unless you folks intend to start providing bus service again, which we didn’t support because there wasn’t enough people...

Gustavson: I’d like to make one observation. Rural residential in it’s various incantations is still one house per parcel. So putting condominiums doesn’t seem to fit with the zoning.

Wood: I understand, I agree with you.

Foritano: Since your comments really paraphrase a lot of the comments I read over the weekend. The plan, as I understand it right now is a collection of vision statements across a half a dozen different areas; some objectives, some policies. What about the word vision or objective or policies do you specifically not understand? More specifically the seven vision statements that are represented, the collection of related objectives and policies. And I’ll ask you as Mr. Depee did, to be very specific. Because I too, not having been part of the process, don’t care especially about the history. I’m going to look at the current plan as objectively as I can in this stage of the game. And I’m trying to understand what the problem is with the collection of vision statements, objectives and policies.

Wood: Sure, the problem is quite simple; the community didn’t get to say. They may be fine vision statements, they may be great policies. The argument is, the community does not get the representation is should have to have a vote.

Barbara Fox, Hansville Resident, Planning Committee member: The reason we are concerned with the plan is that we asked for a lot of zoning changes to be put into the plan. We wanted to look at a way to protect the area. I didn’t live there at the time of the Futures committee was involved, but I wanted to participate in the planning process. I didn’t see any of the zoning or the ordinances or the design ideas we came up with for new construction in the plan. In fact the only zoning change that you were given were nothing that was discussed at a planning meeting. So I’m not sure where it came from or why you’re seeing that zoning change for Norwegian Point area. The zoning changes that we’re concerned with area about OPG’s area and it’s the largest land area of the Hansville zip code. They are looking to change it from 1 in 20 to clustered housing which would give us 400 homes. We’re concerned about stormwater run off and the infrastructure to support that housing. That’s what we wanted to talk about in the plan. We didn’t even get to Land Use; we were cut off before that subject came up. However, we did give many pages of ideas to the County for what we could be putting into the plan regarding land use. So, that’s our beef, is that we didn’t really get an opportunity to work on the plan. I went to every single meeting; I worked in work study sessions with other people who were interested in coming up with zoning changes. It’s insulting to me that we put in all this effort and it’s not in our plan and we’ve been cut out of the process. The other issue I have is that I’m a member of Driftwood Key. I’m a homeowners association, RCW’s and our own bylaws don’t permit us to have any representation by GHAAC. We are the largest community within that zip code, so if you permit GHAAC to be the voice of the community of the plan in the work study sessions as its currently written, that cuts us out. I don’t think that’s fair. We were told by Mr. Bolger that this is just vision statements and that the vision statements had to be developed into goals and policies and action items. And I don’t see any of that in this plan. I don’t see goals and policies and action items. You are being asked to approve a plan that allows the GHAAC to develop as they go. I don’t think that’s right; that’s cutting out the community, it’s not putting out any effort to have any input. I think a plan should have action items it,
I don’t think you should be supporting a plan that doesn’t.

Depee: As the zoning layout on this plan lies out, are you satisfied as far as it affects Driftwood Key? Do you think there should be a higher density or a lower density zoning around it?

Fox: No. Lower density, it’s currently zoned 1 for 20. I want that maintained. Right now there is a request in with the RWIP program to make that different.

Foritano: Your associate, Mr. Wood, indicated that his primary concern with the plan was no involvement or lack of greater community involvement. I think I heard by virtue of all of your input suggests you were very highly involvement as one active member of the community. Is your issues lack of community involvement or is your issue the fact that you and your associates had a whole array of ideas that were not accepted? That, in fact, the plan stopped at action items?

Fox: All those.

Carol Wood: The majority of the people here are GHAAC and their cronies, here tonight. They were the ones that got the word. There was very little publicity; actually there was no publicity, about this extension to the first of September and the hearing further being held down here. Unfortunately, a lot of folks that believe as I do, or Barb Fox does, they work and can’t get here by 5:30. Also, the plan in hard copy that was originally put in, in preliminary draft from, at the Little Boston Library, the Hansville store, and the Driftwood Key clubhouse, it never got the final draft. There a lot of people up there in Hansville that don’t have computers or are not computer savvy or are like myself, who have a dial up modem and can’t download a whole lot of information. So, it’s kind of been an injustice to continue this hearing process without adequate resource and time and notification. There was no sign up at the corner about this being done down here either. I will stick to the issues as Mr. Gustavson had requested earlier towards Art Ellison about what is in the plan that we can do for you. I’m glad Cindy brought up about the elder-housing and the possibility of multi-family housing. There are two instances in the plan as it currently stands; one is under LUB which says follow flexibility on land use.
And it says after it: “Policy: consider overlay zones to allow multi-family and home businesses.” I’m going to assume that multi-family dwellings and home businesses.
Again it’s brought up here the elder housing is actually in the plan. And it says here under ECB: “Enhance cultural diversity.” And it says ECB2: “Support siting and construction of elder housing.” This issue of elder housing has been bantered about in gossip for years. A lot of people are not in favor of it and they used to laugh and say ‘don’t worry about it, it will never happen up here because of the zoning. If we don’t have multi-family zoning up here, so it will never happen.’ Well here it’s mentioned in the plan. And unfortunately, I watch the BRAT television station and the commissioners meetings occasionally. What happens is we watch about Manchester sewer controversy and the Illahee stormwater stuff, you get a lot of input from people and people are pissed off and one thing that really touched a nerve one night about the Manchester sewer development was the guy who was a proponent of it, the commissioner kept saying ‘why do we have to do this now? Why, when so many people are financially strapped, when people don’t really have to do it.’ The reason he sited again and again, it was in our plan, and we’ve got to do it. So, therefore, I think before you validate anything in this plan the people of Hansville ought to know what the hell they’re signing up for. And I’m sorry, but there has not been a big outreach about this plan. People are pissed about the speed tables; they have given up on our community. There is a pall, as Judy Foritano said, in the community that is a result of that. And I’m sorry, but our commissioner, Steve Bauer, has done nothing to resolve that issue. And until Hansville, once again, works as a community, we’re just going to have this division. And I’m sorry, but I was one of the people that actually responded, one of the 386 people that responded and I was one the very few people who were under 49 that responded to that survey. And I actually have learned about people that complained about the speeding, because I run on the roads. I run three miles a day on the roads and where those speed bumps got put in is not where I run. So it doesn’t help me one iota. And I would have never said put speed tables in. I provided you with 9 pages of documents going through the preliminary draft page by page and given you comments and I hope that you got them and I hope some of you people took an honest look and looked at it because I put in three days reading the plan cover to cover to give you that information.

Nevins assures her that he thinks he put in 3 days reading the comments.

Baglio closes public hearing.

6:24:04

Foritano offers to continue the Deliberations/Recommendations to September 15th.

Keeton recommends delaying the Deliberations/Recommendations to September 15th to give time to review the materials.

Taylor asks about the legal perspective of Driftwood Key not being allowed to participate in GHAAC.

Sullivan: The planning committee, most directly involved in formulating this plan, had both GHAAC members and non-GHAAC. It was open to all members of the public that wanted to sign up. Therefore, to address a question about GHAAC and representation in the Hansville community, I’m not sure it’s germane to this plan.

Gustavson: If, by law, Driftwood Key is disallowed by participating, why is Driftwood Key included in the boundaries of the plan?
Sullivan: I'm not aware that, by law, Driftwood Key was disallowed from being involved in the plan.

Keeton: First of all you are asking two questions. One, the Community Development Department is not responsible for the organization known as GHAAC. We are responsible for doing a plan for a community. The community was allowed to participate, encouraged to participate, and did have participation. We did not have anything with Driftwood Key’s homeowners association saying whether you could be in it or GHAAC. People were allowed to participate. What you’re asking of the department and of staff is; ‘How is GHAAC formed?’ That’s outside the purview of this department.

Depee: I think his question is, specifically, is Driftwood Key legally not allowed to participate?

Keeton: No. They participated in the planning process.

Discussion is held about request for legal opinion regarding Driftwood Key’s participation. Keeton states that he will ask legal to review, but there are no guarantees.

Nevins: What I heard is the by-laws at Driftwood Key do not allow them to have a representative. Now any organization gets started anywhere else, there is nothing prohibited about the individual citizen participating in any community group. As far as I know.

Sullivan clarifies how GHAAC appointment differs from the other CAC’s in the County.

Paralez: The planning process that resulted in this final plan that we are looking at, that planning process had members that were solicited from across the Hansville and it’s surrounding communities. Was open to all the community, whether they feel that way or not and it’s obvious from the feedback and I and my fellow commissioners have read that they did not feel that process was a sound one. But from the County’s perspective and according to the County’s process that process was open to anyone in that community that wanted to be a part of that process.

Sullivan: That’s correct.

Paralez summarizes the process and states that we met the burden that the County was obligated to meet.

Keeton explains that DCD exceeded the minimum burden.

Taylor asks about the allowable height in the red or purple zone being 35’; he wants to ensure that the community understands what that means.

Gustavson asks for a list of the representatives from the sub-communities identified. He asks if the final draft has been presented.
Sullivan states that the list of the representatives from the sub-communities it on the DCD website. He states that the revised draft that the Planning Commission received prior to the August 18th public hearing was made available to all the interested parties via email, but weren’t able to take them up to the location specified.

Commissioner Brown asks if staff has made a recommendation.

Sullivan states that staff recommends approval of the plan as its proposed.

I. Work Study I of II: Site Specific Comprehensive Plan Amendments: Pete Sullivan, Associate Planner, DCD and Heather Adams, Associate Planner, DCD
Sullivan gives a review of the 7/21/09 work study explaining what site specific applications are and why they have occurred this year.

Discussion is held about RCO, RI, Policy RL 8 contingent applications.

7:13:10
Sullivan reviews the Speed Site Specific Application. Staff recommends approval.
Sullivan review the Kitsap Propane/Whitworth Site Specific Application. Staff recommendation is inconclusive.

Discussion is held about residential uses and Kitsap Propane.

Sullivan reviews the Arness Site Specific Application.
Adams reviews the Gonzolez Site Specific Application. Staff recommendation is inconclusive.

Taylor asks what the combined size of the property and Brown asks if rural commercial allows multi-family.

Adams reviews the Villopoto Site Specific Application. Staff recommendation is inconclusive.

Nevins: The business has been there a long time. I wonder if we are looking at a map correction rather than a zoning change.

Adams reviews the Unruh Site Specific Application. Staff recommendation is inconclusive.

Depee asks what is on there now; the land is vacant.

Paralez asks if there are environmental issues on these three sites.
Adams reviews the Pilger Site Specific Application. Staff recommendation is inconclusive.

Adams clarifies that the total acreage is 4 acres.
Adams reviews the Henry’s Hardware Site Specific Application. Staff recommendation is for approval.

Adams reviews the next steps.

Nevins discusses the South Kitsap rural industrial land and industrial jobs as it relates to zoning. He is reticent to admit that Kitsap is short of industrial property.

Gustavson states that times change and with that the laws change. He supports industrial jobs.

J. Public Hearing: Site Specific Comprehensive Plan Amendments: Pete Sullivan, Associate Planner, DCD and Heather Adams, Associate Planner, DCD

Foritano opens the public hearing.

Bruce Weber, Stodlemeyer Rd. Resident, speaks to the Arness application: I don’t know much about RL-8, LMRIS, UGA, RCW, but I do know this, 23 years ago I bought a home in a rural area because that's where I wanted to live, that's where I wanted to raise my family. I am vehemently opposed to the change that is being requested. It will destroy the character of my neighborhood. It will put my well water at risk. And I think it’s just too much to ask.

Taylor asks him to point on the map where he lives.

He shows where he lives.

Weber: I bought my home 23 years ago because I wanted the rural lifestyle. If I wanted to live in Silverdale, I would have bought in Silverdale. If I wanted to live in an industrial park, I would have bought a home in an industrial park. I wanted to live in a rural area because that’s where I wanted to live. I don’t want to live an industrial area. I’m also very concerned, as I think you know every house in that area is reliant on well water. Industrial development pollutes wells, it pollutes aquifers. If this aquifer destroyed through industrial activity is the County prepared to step in and deal with the outfall? My property values will be ruined. My home will be worthless without well water. I strongly urge you to decline this request. He expresses concern about the notification process.

Paralez: I would point out that I live around the corner. We run out of water every summer and have to have it trucked in. So, I know from where you speak about the water problem and that all those houses depend on wells. And having the industrial development that we do have in that area has proven problematic where water is concerned. I am having difficulty understanding why along the Bond road we have all the industrial development we do have.

Taylor asks Sullivan to identify where the closest public water line

Sullivan states most likely Poulsbo or Kingston, but it’s not on the map.
Nick Speed, speaks to the Speed application: I have the 13.4 acre parcel on Port Gamble road that the staff has recommended approval of the change from rural protection to rural residential. I’ve owed that property since about 1990 and at the time I purchased the property it was zoned for 2.5 acre development. At the time the County entered the Growth Management Act planning, there were public hearings, and this was in 1995. At that time the proposed down-zoning of my property was to 5 acres. I attended the hearings; I was in approval of that because I did not intend to ever develop the property to a greater density than that allowed me to do. I also contacted staff to make sure that was the recommended designation for my property. Subsequently, there was another round of Growth Management planning. At that time I was without a job for a period and had taken a job in Oregon, which I did for 8 years by coming home on alternate weekends. So I was out of the loop and unaware that without further notice the County again down-zoned me to take away all the subdivision rights that I had. I’m really kind of appalled that I have to be here because I think that what has occurred was an inequitable thing at the time that it was done. I really hope that you will rectify an inequity in the past and approve this proposal.

Taylor comments about this issue of changing private property zoning and that he is working to change that law.

Bill Arness, speaks to the Arness application: I just wanted to state why we are asking for a change in zoning. The reason we are doing this is to get commonality in the area. He shows a map of his property. When I talked to DCD, since I own the whole parcel, they say you have to ask for the whole thing to be commercial. But only about 4 or 5 acres would be commercial because of topography. So the rest of this would be open space or set aside. It wouldn’t be suitable, it would be suitable, but the density isn’t high enough to spend the extra money to make it and there’s a creek on one side here that would have setbacks. The little circle in the middle, the only reason we talked about it when we made the application is that if we didn’t have that zoned there, then if you had residential between two rurals, that didn’t make much sense. So there’s not going to be anything. Now this little parcel here is the tag parcel from the other side of the road, this side here is already zoned industrial. He continues to explain the various parts of his property. He explains the cars on the property.

Jeff Coomb, speaks to the Unruh application: The application shows .75 acres being requested to change and with setbacks. But by the time we do the setbacks, critical areas, we’re familiar with the process, the .75 acres is going to shrink to probably 8-9,000 sq. ft. So, it doesn’t totally impact the entire area. For the record I want to make sure the Planning Commission understands that on February 13th we made application to Kitsap County for Site Specific application; we met that timeline. On March 3rd of 2009 we received a technically complete from Kitsap County; we met that timeline. On June 16th I received a letter from Kitsap County stating about RL-8 that there could be some potential problems and there was a new zoning table to address; I accepted that not knowing exactly what that meant, but we wanted to move forward with the Site Specific application. And then on July 13th I received another technically complete application letter. And then on August 17th of 2009 we received a Declaration of Non-Significance. So, for the record, on our Site Specific application, we’ve met the timelines that was outlined to us to apply for a Site Specific Comprehensive Plan Amendment.
Change. When I started this process a couple of years ago, I think this property might have been left out and I asked about a map correction; it’s just a small piece, kind of insignificant. But, as I discussed that with Long Range Planning we thought we would wait until this year when it was our turn to go through the entire process. This project along with a lot of the other projects there that we call Keyport Junction is a candidate for a LAMRID. We are served by public water, we have a sewer line, we have traffic signal, roads, and older businesses have been established. The Keyport Junction area really is a candidate for a LAMRID. Regarding RL-8, been working with staff, their perception of the potential problem; trying to distinguish between rural and urban services. I think is defined in section 22 of the Code, Density, Design and Setback Standards. I got to tell you staff is working real hard with this and me and other people are going to figure out RL-8 and come up with a conclusion and answer that will make it easier for the Planning Commission to make a decision. For the record, we met all the timelines, we thought we met all the criteria of our Site Specific Comprehensive Plan Amendment and I know we will be continued and we will see you again at a later date.

Baglio asks about the boundary after the BLA.

Coomb: It does go up to the dash line.

Taylor: What road is the 100ft right of way?

Coomb: Silverdale way before it meets hwy 308 at Keyport.

Nevins: Has Mr. Unruh owned the property throughout the past couple years?

Coomb: Yes he has.

Depee: During the application process when you were informed that you had to conform to the RL-8 portion. What would happen if you just said no?

Coomb: Well, I really don't know. We were able to move forward and work with staff.

Nevins: You mentioned that it’s a candidate for a LAMRID, if that’s the case, then not only this property, but others that would qualify, for being developed prior to 1990 and other certain criteria; that would be your solution.

Coomb: That would be a solution. This is the solution for 2009.

Bob Whitworth, speaks to the Whitworth application: He points out his parcel location. Tom, you mentioned earlier the consideration of increasing industrial areas, due to the fact you had a feeling that there was enough industrial area already established in Kitsap County. I'm a small business; I've been in business since 88, a family business. We have between 8-16 employees depending on the time of year and the workload; all local employees. Across the street this is zoned industrial right now. I don’t know if you’ve done much shopping for property. Two years ago I did check on the property and they wanted over $6.00/foot. In order for us to have the amount of property we would need for an excavation company and the equipment necessary and a shop and so forth and to establish it, it would cost upward of a million dollars. For a small business that is just completely out of the question. The business has grown in such a fashion that it out grew our personal property and was starting to disturb the neighbors. So it was only right for me to try to find a piece our property in our budget in an area that makes the most sense. It makes sense, one because we could afford it, two; along this south side of the Ecology road is industrial right now. He points out who owns which parcels. With the transfer trucks continuously going up and down the road, people bringing in their garbage 6 days a week; with the composting facility, the smell from it and the transfer station, its really not feasible or would make sense to have a residence on the property. All parcels there are being used in a commercial fashion now and that it why Kitsap Propane and our self are proposing that these parcels be rezoned.

Foritano closes the public hearing.

K. For the Good of the Order: Chair Foritano

Baglio asks about the timeline on staff revising staff reports.

Sullivan: We don’t have a timeline for revision of staff reports. This would conclude Public Hearing part 1 of 2, so it wouldn’t be a continuation on the 15th, it would be the second batch. He discusses the options for proceeding.

Discussion is held about how to proceed with the applications and the timeline. Discussion is held about RL08, how it will affect the Site Specific Applications, the Planning Commission concerns, and staffs plans for moving forward.

A motion is made by Commissioner Gustavson to adjourn the meeting.

Time of Adjournment: 8:23:05
